Time Speeds, Slows As Northites Work, Play

When Lieutenant Colonel John Glenn made his history making flight last February, theoretically he lived seventy-two hours of his life by the clock, while the actual time passed inside the capsule was less than five hours.

The question remains: How reliable is time as an accurate measurement?

Is a year to a kindergartner the same to a ninth grader? Or a faculty member?

We all remember how many eons passed in the three days before Christmas when we were kids.

It wasn't that long this vear.

When a child is five years old, one year is one-fifth of his life. When he is twenty, it is one-twentieth. When we are older, it seems as if time goes much faster. Doesn't it?

Besides the first five senses, scientists have now added about ten more, including the sense of distance, and the sense of time.

Is this sense different to all people? Our senses of tastes differ, could not our sense of time also?

Last year, it was the observation of more than one student that first hour passed much quicker than sixth, and that gym class lasted only (in their minds) about fifteen minutes while other classes might seem to last two hours.

All the above just goes to prove that time is not standard to all. The next thirty years of our lives will probably just about equal, in our estimation, the first fifteen. When we are older we will look back, as our parents have, at our junior high and high school years and remember how they just "flashed by."

Mr. Somerville, through his diligent work in the training of instrumental music skills and appreciation has earned our continued gratitude.

His outstanding contribution to our school is duly acknowledged, in part, by the dedication of this yearbook to this talented man.

Students of North, although active in many extra-curricular activities, do remember that North School is first and always a place for scholastic endeavor.

Faculty

Faculty members not only teach us our subjects, but, by setting examples, often show us how to conserve time and energy too.

Northites have often learned by observing the faculty that time need not be wasted. This is worth remembering long after our junior high years are past.

Mr. Snider - Science

Miss Hauck - English and Journalism

Miss Otto - Gym

Miss Bublitz and Mr. Sherman - Gym

Members of North's faculty have assisted externs from Central Michigan and Michigan State Universities in gaining teaching experience for their future positions.

Faculty Helps Externs Gain Experience

Under the direction of Dr. Troutman of Central Michigan University Extern Supervisor, were Miss Sue Bublitz and Miss Sue Otto teaching under Mrs. Newberg, Mr. Max Sherman with Mr. Goodenow and Miss Carol Hauck with Mrs. Borg and Miss Arnold in English and Journalism. From Michigan State, Mr. Richard Zahn externed with Mr. Newberg and Mr. Richard Snider with Mr. Gibbs.

Students

Northites working in groups have accomplished much in the fields of citizenship, scholarship, and athletics. However, the individual still remains the backbone of the school. It is the quality of each separate student that makes a school what it is.

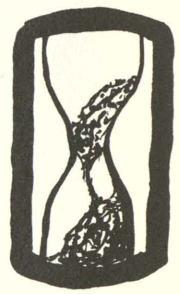
Northites of Today Prepare For Work of Tomorrow



Will Maureen be an astronaut? Will Ann be a cook? How about John? Will he be a scientist?

Northites are thinking about careers now for the future. Students' modern education prepares them for the unknown positions of the future.

We are never too young, so start thinking, and ask ourselves what will we be?

Counselors Help Students Explore Solutions

Polly Hayes, eighth grader, discusses with Miss Arnold her high school curriculum.

Mr. Johnson counsels Robert Wohlfeil concerning his choice of a future career.

Miss Arnold and Mr. Johnson, North's guidance counselors, have helped many students each day throughout the year. They have discussed career and schedule choices, social and personal problems, and standardized test scores.

A girls' ninth grade class listens attentively to Miss Arnold while discussing social customs.

Classrooms

Since the time of earliest schools, the classroom has been an essential part of a person's life. Time, however, does not remain stationary and neither do the classrooms. From the one-room school of the past have developed the present large schools. From the simple courses of reading, writing and arithmetic taught by one teacher from one book have come the complex studies of today with their visual aids, teaching machines, supplementary books and active and participating learning and teaching. Even with these changes the purpose of the classroom remains the same; a place for the student to have a chance to learn that which is necessary to equip him for his role of the future as worker, parent, citizen.

Staff Works on Publications

Annual editors E. Spaulding, R. Pond, D. Block and S. Easlick look over publication.

With a nose for news, the Journalism class published a monthly paper which covered school happenings, feature stories and editorials to keep Northites informed. Reporters were busy interviewing teachers on their beats and covering organizational activities. Finally, after every issue of the paper had been printed and distributed to the student body, the hours of work that have been put into this book began. As the years grow dim, the staff hopes that the annual will be referred to more and more to look back upon the year of 1961-62, with its joy and disappointments.

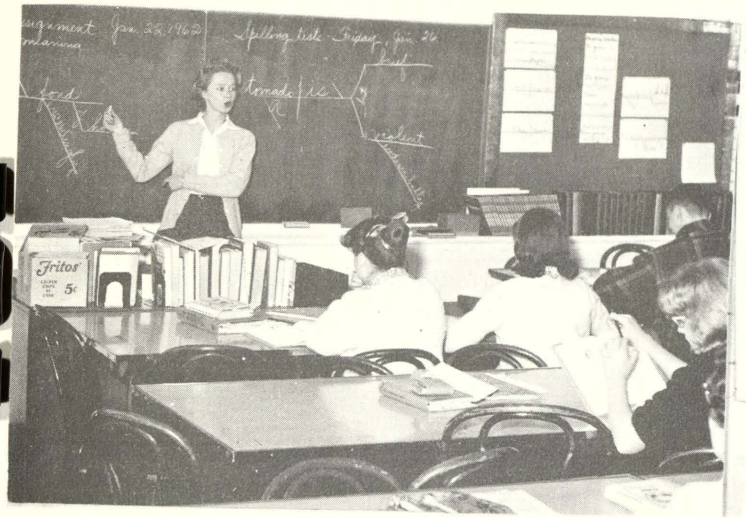
Seventh Grade - Mrs. Borg



Many students this year have found English interesting and challenging under the guidance of North's experienced English teachers. Literature, both prose and poetry, the structure of the English language and spelling are included in the curriculum.

Seventh graders this year have just begun their long climb to English mastery and have just been introduced to the mysteries of the subject and predicate. Eighth graders learned about diagramming sentences and parts of speech. They read Longfellow's "Evangeline" and learned about early and modern American literature.

Above: While Mrs. Mizener gives a student individual attention, the rest of the class studiously attacks their ninth grade grammar.

Ninth graders this year continued their study of great literature by reading Scott's "Ivanhoe" and many short stories and poems. They also learned more about complex grammar.

Here, Mrs. Habel introduces a ninth grade class into the history and background of "Ivanhoe."

Past and Present

Laura Mauch discusses future occupations with Miss Trask.

Mrs. Northcott's eighth grade classes are studying American History.

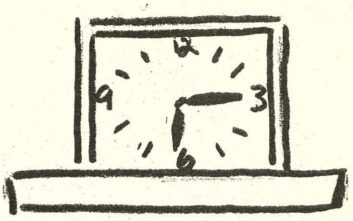
Students steadily working in their social studies classes completed assignments and projects this year which ranged from life occupations to facts about various states.

The seventh grade studied about beginnings of America in the old world, while the eighth grade was studying American history, and the ninth grade fought the Con-Con battle as well as learning about how State and National government works.

Mr. Wells's ninth grade work on booklet about United States government for class use.

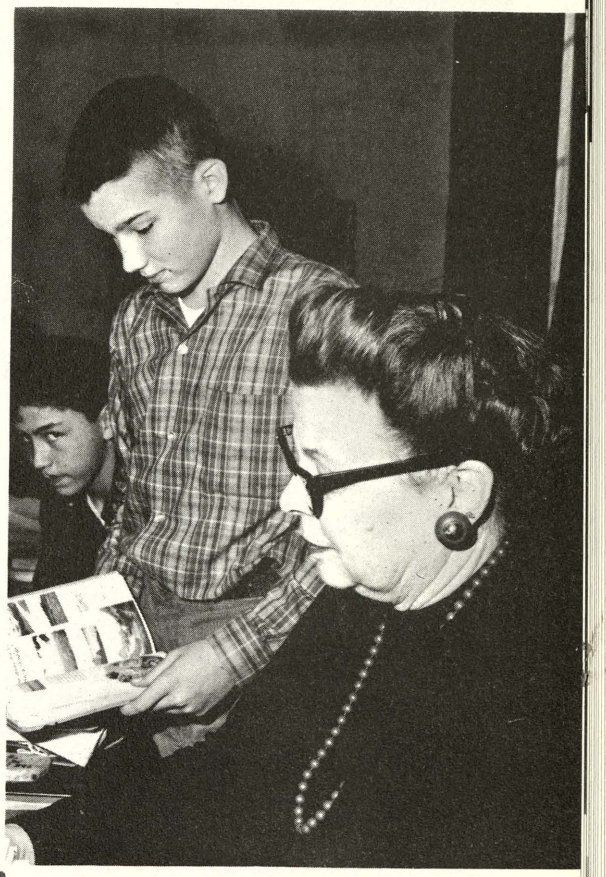
Students of Miss Stenger's seventh grade read about Michigan.

Courtland Richardson consults with Mr. Gibbs for needed information.



Tomorrow's Scientists Prepare Today

In this day and age, science has become increasingly important. With the aid of Mr. Gibbs, Miss Meyer, Mrs. Mertz, and Mr. Donaghy many Northites have become greatly interested in science. Under their influence and direction many experiments have been made and new ideas have been formed.



Miss Meyers helps David Brooks with an advanced assignment.

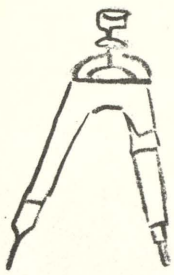
Mr. McMacken instructs one of the students in his mechanical drawing class.

No doubt many of our former time telling devices were made and designed by the drafters and craftsmen of years ago. The printers of yesterday put on paper the information concerning the subject of time we now have. Today the time those men spent enables the craftsmen of today and those of tomorrow to learn their trade so that they can help work on the solutions of the future's problems.



Fred Majesky receives help from instructor, Mr. Heinz.

Sewing a fine seam and cooking on "the burner with a brain" could describe the past year's activities of the homemaking classes. Along with this they polished their manners and learned how to be gracious hostesses.

Seventh grade classes were introduced to sewing equipment and various fundamentals involved in cooking.

Eighth grade classes discussed good grooming, child care, and practiced their cooking talents on such dishes as cream soups, salads, and desserts.

Besides experimenting with advanced cooking, ninth grade classes learned about sewing materials.

At the end of the second semester a style show and tea were given for the mothers of those girls taking homemaking.

Mr. Hayes - Conversational Spanish

Students at North are now in the second year of learning conversational languages. Seventh and eighth grade Spanish is being taught by Mr. Hayes, seventh and eighth grade French by Mrs. Cartwright and Miss Weaver, and seventh grade German by Mrs. Hausler. After this conversational language practice, North's students are better prepared to go on with their academic language classes in the ninth grade.

Language students are now learning about the language and customs of people in other countries of the world. Students in Miss Faist's class learn about Spain and the language of the Spaniards, and the Latin classes are learning about the Romans and their Latin language. Mrs. Cartwright's ninth grade French classes are learning the ways of French and how they speak.

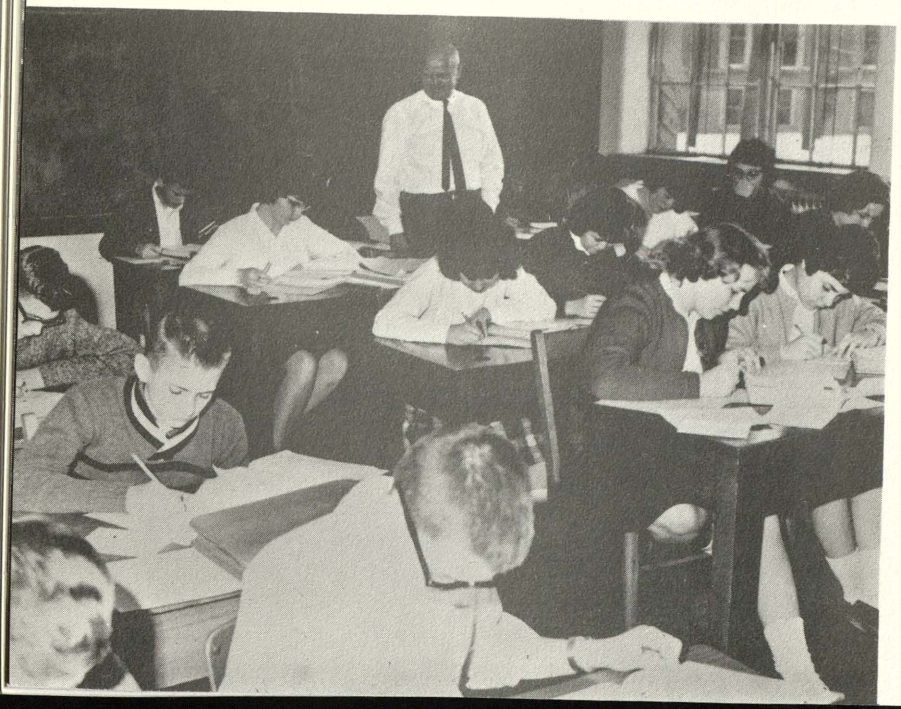
Future Scientists Prepare with Mathematics

Mr. Newberg aids a student in his algebra class with her classwork.



Mathematics is the key to time. Today the call for nearly exact time is very great, for the world is moving ahead rapidly in scientific research. Students learning mathematics today may someday count the revolutions of electrons inside the tiny atom. These students may also tell time by watching sunlight bounce back and forth between two points. Truly mathematics is opening the door to accurate and exact time.

Organizations—Activities

Time and energy spent on extra-curricular activities helped North to develop a student body with many and varied interests.

An accurate picture of North's activities and organizations, among the best in the city, may be found on the following pages.

"Planning - Thinking - Action equals Strength and Success"

North's P. T. A. season this year began on September fourteenth with a "Get Acquainted Tea" to introduce new P. T. A. board and faculty members. September twenty-first was the date of the "Early Elementary Potluck" for the kindergarten, first, second, and third grade students and their families. Seventh grade students and families attended potluck on October nineteenth.

On Thursday, November sixteenth, North's Annual Card Party with Mrs. Clifford Behrens as chairman, and Bake Sale, with Mrs. Clarence Dean as chairman, was held. The Christmas meeting was held on December fourteenth with entertainment provided by the music and auditorium classes.

Students presented their parents with a program of their classes for the annual Open House. Parents follow their children's schedule.

On February fifteenth the annual "Founder's Day Smorgasborg" was held. Judge Glen Jordan of the Probate Court was guest speaker. March fifteenth was the date of the eighth grade potluck, with Dave Sare, an Arthur Hill exchange student from West Germany, as guest speaker. The season closed with a potluck for the fourth. fifth and sixth grade students.

Student Council

Mr. Parr, Sponsor; D. Miller, T. Miller, J. Bottke, L. Mauch, R. Pond, P. Hayes, S. Massman, R. Chandler, B. Nagel,

Serving North on the Student Council this year were: Thomas Miller, president of the school; Laura Mauch, vice-president of the school and the presidents of the other councils, Robert Chandler Mark Fischer, Polly Hayes, John Bottke, Betty Nagel and Sandra Massman from the Regular Monitors, Robert Pond from the Noon Monitors and Donna Miller from the Morning Monitors. The Student Council is the highest student controlled legislative body at North School. Mr. Parr worked with the group in their campaign on reducing the littering around the school. Other activities included helping to maintain North's good citizenship record.

Vice-Presidents' Council

Raising money and filling gift boxes for the Red Cross was the responsibility of the Council. This year the V-P's chose President Mark Fischer, Vice-President Patricia Kothe, Secretary Sue Lapine and Treasurer Debra Hoffman. Their activities were directed by Miss Faist, sponsor.

Boosters' Council

Under the direction of Mrs. Bosley, sponsor, the Boosters had the responsibility of selling the tickets to all athletic contests, auditorium, choir and band functions. John Bottke was their president, Morrie Stevens was their vice-president and their secretary was Connie Zehnder.

Presidents' Council

Under the direction of Mrs. Mizener, the main duty of the Presidents' Council is to maintain and to boost good citizenship and scholarship at North. Robert Chandler was president of the council, Clarence Mauch was vice-president and Randy Rousseau was secretary.

Secretaries' Council

Correct procedures in taking minutes, conducting meetings and aiding home room teachers in roll calling and in reading bulletins were the responsibilities of the Secretaries' Council under the direction of Mrs. Habel. The Council elected Polly Hayes, president; Cherrill Collins, vice-president, and Linda Verhey, secretary.

Last June President Thomas Miller and Vice-President Laura Mauch took the oath of office from last year's officers Phyllis Peacock and Kathy Minard.

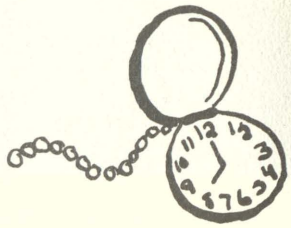
The Photography Club met once a week during the school year. Members of the club learned how to develop and enlarge film while working in the school dark room. The art of taking pictures and developing them were club projects. First semester officers were: President Gordon Hirst, Vice-President Ronald Kempter, Secretary David Gwinn and Treasurer Willam Ford. Mr. Gibbs is the teacher sponsor for the Photography Club.



Students Maintain Interest Clubs

Y-Teens, a junior girls' club sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. for greater world understanding and to aid people and to share in friendship with people of all races and nationalities, met every Wednesday under the direction of Miss Pederson. Among their varied activities were potlucks, Easter gifts for Saginaw hospitals, hayride and ice-skating parties. They entertained for incoming sixth graders.

Sports

Many of today's students look forward to being good athletes. Every junior high school in Saginaw has its baseball, basketball, football, swimming, and volley ball teams. Athletics are very much a part of our schools today.

In today's schools students find it just as wise to train the body as to train the mind. Today, people are urged to develop a sound mind and a healthy body.

There is more to athletics than just building a strong body. Such activities help people become good winners and also good losers. And, of course, they are all fun.

Elementary

Students in the Elementary spend much time learning to get along with one another and developing into good citizens.

Elementary students learn the three R's and how to study. This they will use throughout their lives.

Mrs. Naomi M. Myers
Elementary Principal

To those who are leaving North—

"May we wish you success in your higher education.

May your memories of "North" be pleasant ones.

And may we all remember - Anyone who stops learning is old, whether this happens at ten or eighty.

Anyone who keeps on learning not only remains young, but becomes constantly more valuable, regardless of physical capacity."

Naomi Myers

For years Mrs. Walker has given her time to the development of boys' and girls' education, both in their school work and in character.

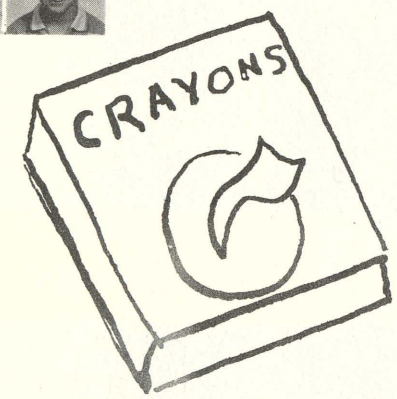
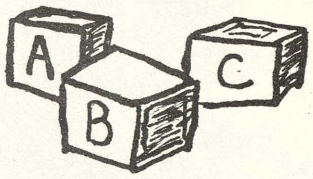
Kindergarteners Learn to Work, Play Together--

This year, as in previous years, we have been primarily interested in providing for our children the best possible school environment in order that they might feel secure and experience optimum growth in all areas.

We have endeavored to create in each child the idea of his worth as an individual in contributing to the whole of the group. We have had many happy experiences just living together during the past year; exchanging ideas, learning to give as well as take, being thoughtful of one another have all helped to create a warm atmosphere within the group.





First Graders Learn To Read and Print

We had an enjoyable time with our unit on pets, having several animals visit our room; pigeons, kittens, cats, dogs, turtles and fish. We planted seeds and watched them grow until we could take them home and plant them in our gardens.

We decided we had the most fun making our pillows out of wrapping paper, sewing them with yarn and then painting our pet on each one.

Miss Palmer 117

We read and painted pictures about space. We wrote stories and made animals out of clay. We worked with numbers and built tall buildings out of blocks. We used colored paper and paste to make pictures of our family. We painted a mural about winter and finger painted for our Christmas wrapping paper. We cared for our pet hamster. We bought groceries from our supermarket. We sang and danced and played our rhythm instruments. We had fun making pop corn and apple sauce.

Second Graders Study Our Community Helpers

What shall we be when we grow up? Some of us will want to be helpers. Our Big Book of School Helpers was fun to make by interviewing and reporting. Some of our "future firemen" were inspired by our trip to the Central Fire Station. The girls are looking forward to being good homemakers. After trips to Leppein's Home Bakery and the Gase Baking Company, we did some baking too. Making butter was just loads of fun. Our trip through the Bowman Dairy will be long remembered. We're sure to have our scientists and space men. Just when we'll launch our own rockets is yet to be seen. There will be those of us who will be happy writing original stories, producing books or perhaps owning a pet shop or being a farmer. What shall we be when we're grown up? We are bursting with ideas now; we'll just have to wait and see!

Mrs. Willman 116

Our greatest adventure in second grade was writing our own stories of our experiences and fairy tales too. Each day a student would put a story on the board and the class would correct it. We wrote enough stories to make three books that we each took home and also one big book of our collection for our room.

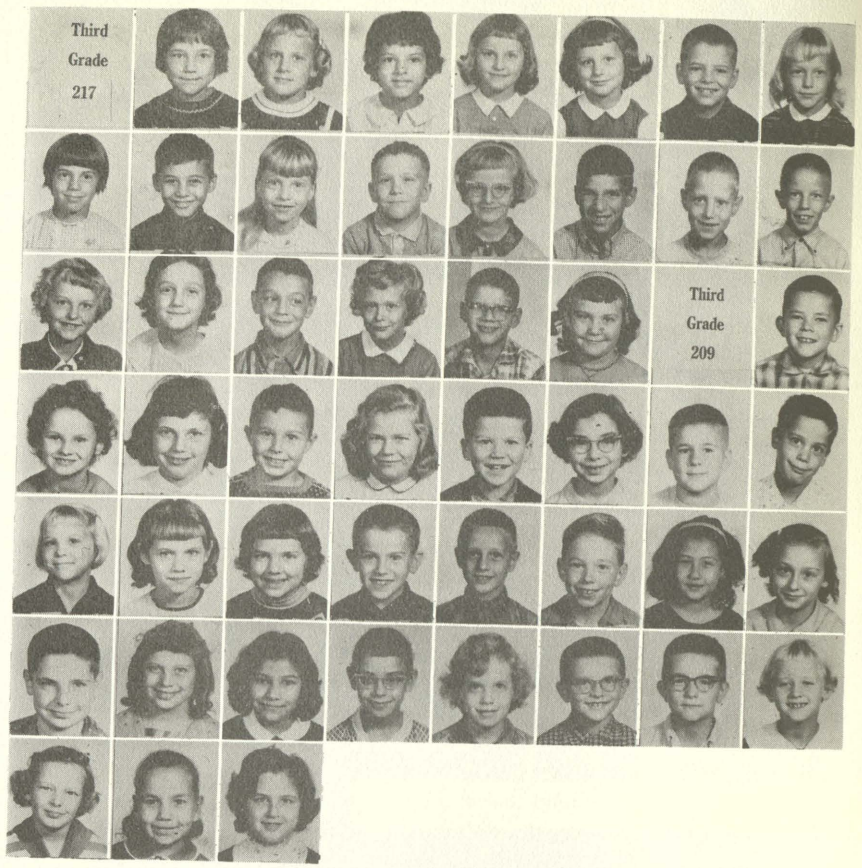
As second graders we studied how to be good citizens. We read about the community and its helpers with special emphasis on the dairy, bakery and the post office.

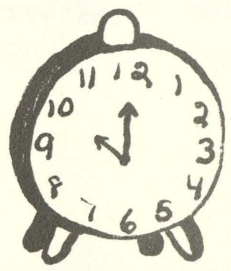
Mrs. Ruby 115

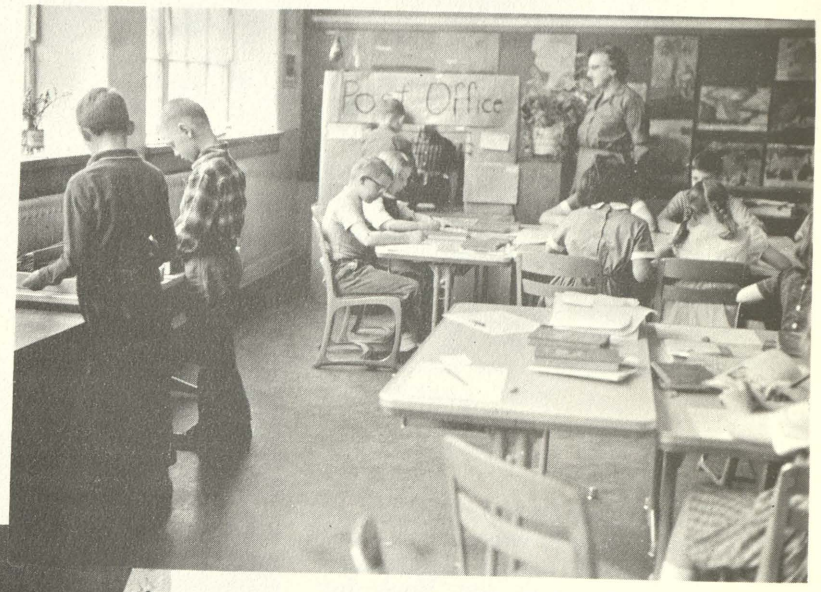
Third Graders Learn Cursive Writing

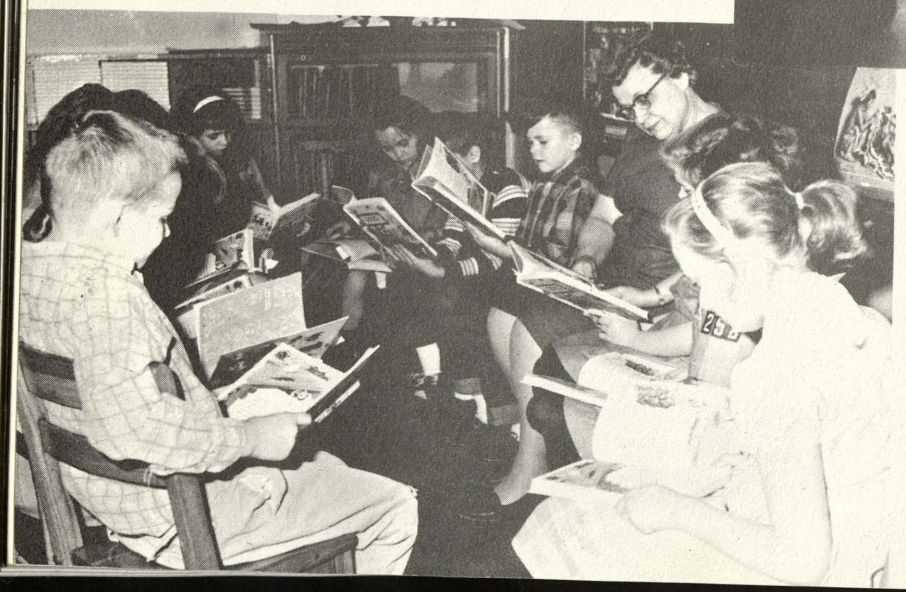
In Miss Kundinger's room, we had a very interesting year in the third grade. We enjoyed our study of Indians and Pioneers when we made tepees, clothing, pottery, rugs, beads, and butter and bread. We learned cursive writing. In arithmetic we learned to carry and to borrow. We did many experiments in science and we worked hard on our shell unit with the second grade.

In second grade our big project was community helpers in Miss Kundinger's room We constructed a Post Office and sent letters, buying stamps and delivering the mail. We enjoyed working with many art materials. We made stick puppets and dramatized our stories. We wove cloth and worked with clay. In arithmetic we learned new addition and subtraction facts and wrote story problems. We learned many new songs.









The third grade enjoys learning about Indians, early settlers and transportation. Col. Glenn's mode of transportation may how be added to our list. We are becoming more interested in current events and the highlight of the year is the day we learn to WRITE.

Fourth Graders Acquire Interest and Knowledge Of Other Children, Places

We have had an interesting year in social studies learning about our country from the time of the explorers until now. We know that we have a great country and we are proud to be Americans. We are planning to take a trip to Cranbrook in May.

Mrs. Vogel 213

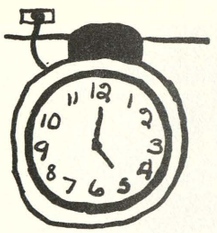
This year Mrs. Evert's fourth grade read and discussed about the moist and hot lands in Africa and about the high and low lands in Europe. We found that temperatures change living habits. In many ways, we are all dependent upon each other in this big world.

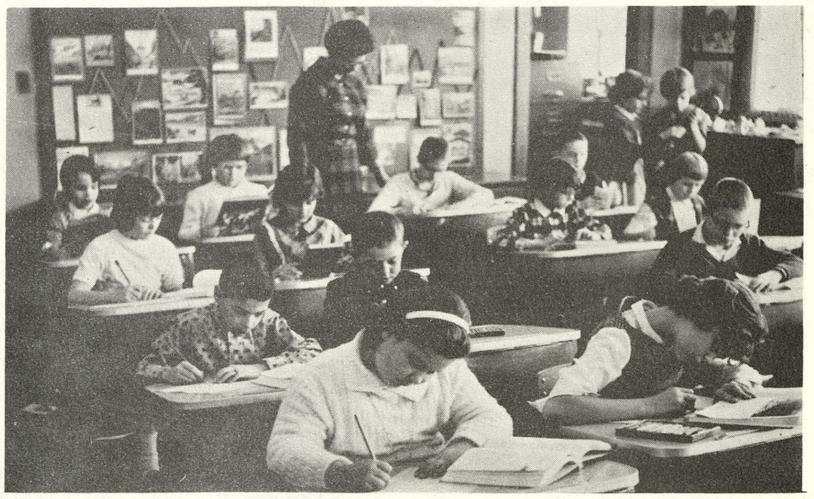
We have worked to make sure of multiplication, subtraction and addition facts to aid us in understanding long division.

Mr. Kaminski has been in frequently giving us practice in physical fitness exercises.

Many of us have continued our special interest classes after school. Throughout the year we have tried to remember the need of being a desirable citizen which will help us to succeed in our life.

Mrs. Evert 218





Mrs. Vogel 213

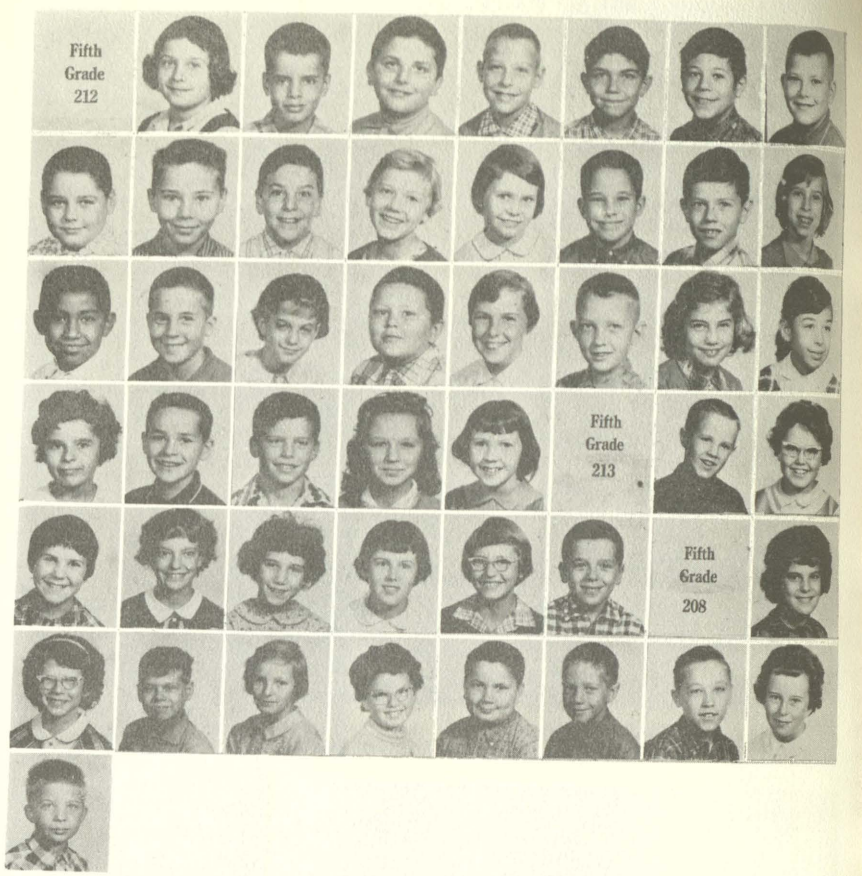
Fifth Graders Work On Science, History, The Americas

We studied many different countries. When the fifth grade studied Hawaii they had a Luau inviting the sixth grade and Mrs. Myers.

Both grades studied invertebrates and marine life past and present; this led to a trip to the museum of natural history in Ann Arbor.

We took trips to the Saginaw museum and saw displays on Japan, early lumbering days, and the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Mrs. Martin 208



Mrs. Wells 212

Out fifth grade has been busy trying to improve our spelling and story writing. Long division and fractions have been our mian interest in arithmetic.

We had a Mexican fiesta with real Mexican food prepared by two of our mothers and a committee.

We had a Presidents' Fair.

Sixth Graders Concentrate On Science, The Universe, Foreign Lands

In Mrs. Campbell's room, we have done much work in science this year and learned many new things. When we studied simple machines, we drew a large mural showing the uses. Our own science fair was a highlight of our year, with ten members of our group being chosen as having outstanding projects. This has also been a great year for the study of the universe and of outer space and what the future may be in these.

Elementary Junior Red Cross made nut cups, place mats, and other items which they distributed to local hospitals. Mrs. Campbell was the sponsor and the representatives were Kip Behren and Bob Rice.
